

How do students with disabilities benefit?

Students with disabilities who have been in the least inclusive settings are more likely to perform worse than students who are included.

Students with disabilities who have been included in school:

- are healthier (as inclusion increases, so does health),
- perform better at school,
- are more likely to look forward to going to school,
- are more likely to be included and be part of their communities after graduation,
- are more likely to have employment and make use of community leisure activities.
